

Steven Aitchison

Epic Alpacas

Steve Aitchison is proprietor and manager of Epic Alpacas, dedicated to breeding superior alpacas, fleece, and fleece products. Steve and his wife, Casey, have built one of the largest alpaca ranches in California at 150 alpacas, with an additional 25 new cria due in Fall of 2014. They enjoy networking with their fellow alpaca breeders and look forward to even more participation in both local and national alpaca events.

Steve has made an enormous investment into the future of the alpaca industry and has a vested interest in making sure it keeps growing, diversifying, and adapting to the marketplace's demands. As a co-founder of the Alpaca Coalition of America, he is working with some of the top experts in the business to help ensure alpaca growers not only have a future, but a prosperous one.

In addition to working for the alpaca industry at a national level, Steve also helped create the Mariposa County 4-H Alpaca Project to foster future alpaca enthusiasts.

Prior to shifting his focus to alpacas, Steve's extensive experience in marketing and design has allowed him to hold many positions as an officer and/or director on multiple boards over the past 25 years, including the biotech, sports, entertainment, and healthcare fields, as well as various non-profit organizations.
